

Oscar Award Pair Has Lot in Common

By JAMES BACON
AP Motion Picture Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — No one commented on it at the time but this year's two top Academy Award winners — Alec Guinness and Joanne Woodward — have a lot in common.

Guinness long has been known as a faceless actor or, paradoxically, the man with 1,000 faces. Joanne, who won an Oscar for "The Three Faces of Eve," actually is the girl of 1,000 faces.

Friends of the actress often pass her on the 20th Century-Fox lot and fail to speak simply because they fail to recognize her. Of hundreds of photographs of her filed away in the publicity department, there are few that look alike.

It's more than hair-dos, Joanne believes. It's something inside her. The movies' great box-office draws always have been definite personalities both on and off screen.

"But," says Joanne, "because I'm never the same, I have hopes of becoming a box-office draw. If anybody is going to come to me to be a different character for me, it's because they expect that in the last time."

"I'm not a personality unless I'm a character — I'm nobody." And that, she says, is why she went from the three different persons in "The Three Faces of Eve" to the Southern floozy in "No Down Payment" to the frustrated spinster in "The Long, Hot Summer" to the busybody housewife in "Rally Around the Flag, Boys!"

In her next picture she will portray a girl 11 years younger than her real age of 28.

In "Rally Around the Flag," though he looked straight at her real-life husband, Paul Newman. The part calls for her to wear a fluffy hair-do. She went straight from the hairdresser to the commissary to have lunch with Newman.

He came in, looked around for his wife but didn't spot her — although he looked straight at her several times. When she finally yelled at him, he took one look and could only say: "Shirley Temple. I'd know you anywhere."

Will Merge Military, Civil Radar

WASHINGTON (AP) — A large-scale merger of civilian and military long-range radar equipment to scan the skyways was announced by the government today.

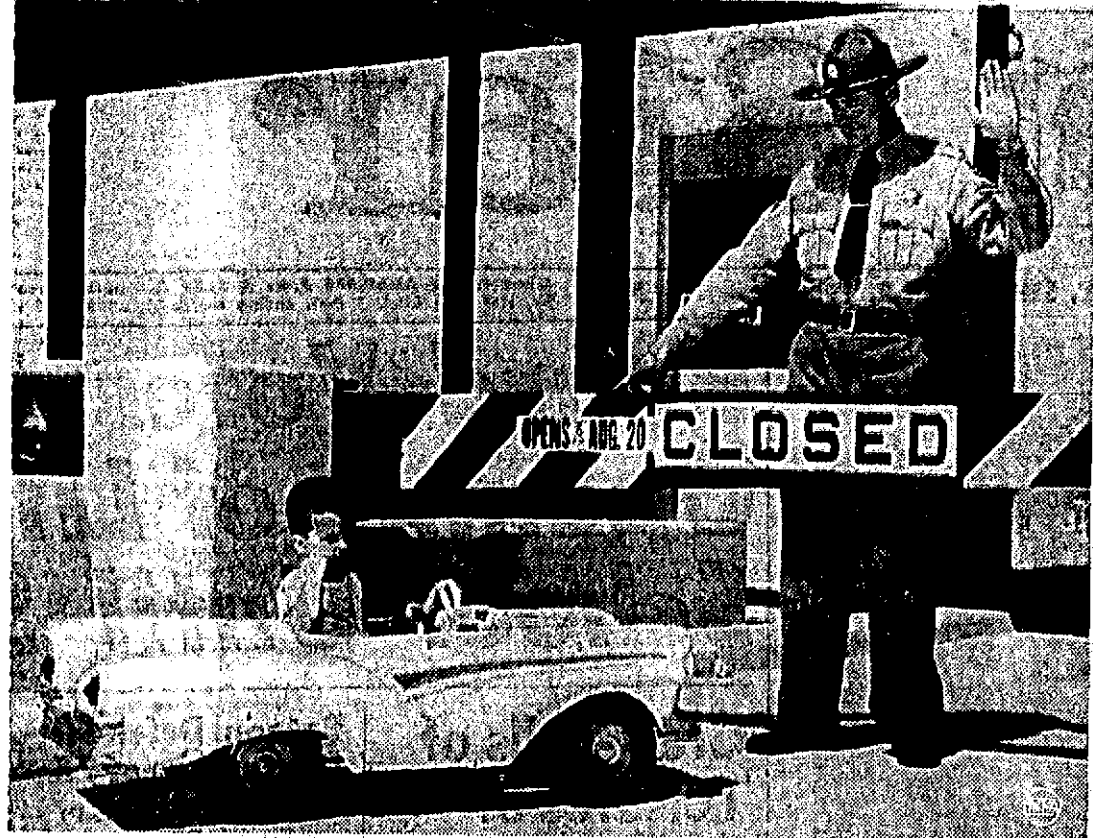

Joint use of the electronic eyes for civil air traffic control and for air defense is expected to save many millions of dollars and allow smoother performance of both types of operations.

Civil Aeronautics Administrator James T. Pyle and Lt. Gen. J. H. Aldridge, chief of the Air Defense Command, announced the program scheduled to go into effect sometime this fall for joint use of 31 high-power radar facilities with aircraft spotting capability located at 135 to 200 miles. More radar sets are planned for the joint service later.

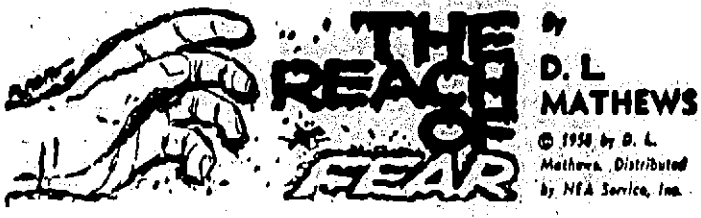

The CAA intends to employ the radar for its air traffic control tasks. The Air Force, Army and National Guard will use it for air defense. The heavy radar equipment stretches across the country from Seattle to Miami.

Besides allowing lower equipment and operating costs, the joint use cuts down on radar interference and coordination problems.

The CAA estimated that of the 100 radar sets planned for the air traffic control system more than half will be for joint use by the military.

TOO LITTLE AND TOO EARLY—Who wouldn't be glad—with a shiny '57 model (model) car and a brand-new highway he can't venture on? That's how four-year-old Kevin Coffey of Chicago felt when told he couldn't be the first "motorist" on the new Northwest Tollway, Lieut. Paul Wells of the Tollway police patrol had to explain to Kevin that the 76-mile road from O'Hare International Airport to South Beloit, Wis., wasn't open for traffic. And Coffey's cup of disappointment was made even more bitter when he learned that no vehicle incapable of meeting the Tollway's minimum speed of 40 m.p.h. will be allowed.

Chapter XXGII

The office was pretty well filled with members of the force when Morrison got back. There was a suppressed excitement in the room, rather like the last few minutes before a big horse race.

He had spent the last few hours talking with Garageman and had learned exactly nothing. He hoped Fleck and Grimes had better luck with their photographs.

"There was no mistaking the feeling of jubilation in the air as he walked through the door. Grimes spotted him first and said, 'Here he is now.'"

"We think our boy bought some tires," Fleck answered in his soft voice. At least the guy answers the description. The state patrol boys found the place where he bought them out in Haller."

The fellow that sold them identified the picture?"

"They're showing it to him now. Well hear before long, but it's pretty certain."

How about the shoe man? He recognizes him?"

He thinks so, but he can't say for sure. Says the picture must be real old, and after all, Lieutenant, we have to have positive proof. It was Grimes that spoke, of course, but Morrison let the sarcasm go by.

"You ready to take him?" Morrison asked.

"We've got him staked out," Fleck answered.

Tomorrow will be a bunch of fair-haired boys with the beloved taxayers. They'll keep us on a pedestal for at least two hours. Aden answered, "yep?" Morrison asked, "Ignoring Grimes was becoming a habit."

He talked to Mrs. Janssen. She denied that anyone came to the house, but it doesn't seem that the woman across the street would be lying. She didn't say Mrs. Janssen had a boy friend alive, she said that Janssen came home. The way she tells it she was expecting company about that time, so it's perfectly natural that she would be looking out of the window," Fleck answered.

According to the way Aden tells it, the woman thought she was giving Janssen an alibi," Grimes added.

It must have been him. I try to keep an open mind, but I could believe anything about that Janssen."

sen woman. She's the sort that makes me sick to my stomach," Morrison admitted.

The detectives looked puzzled and waited for him to explain.

Instead of arresting him, have someone go out and ask him to come down to headquarters. Tell him we need his help. When he's on his way, have someone there with a search warrant and give the house a going-over. You're sure to find something."

Who does what? Grimes asked.

You and Fleck take the search. You've had more experience, and besides, think how pleased Detective Aden will be when he brings in his first murderer."

Their conversation was interrupted by an abrupt summons from the desk office. They hurried over.

Another assault in Parkdale. My God," Fleck sighed, "who now?"

Mrs. Helen Verhey. Somebody beat her up. A Dr. Spencer put in an emergency call for an ambulance and rushed her to the county hospital. First report is that she's in bad shape."

Morrison turned to Fleck, his Grimes-like care of the identification expressionless. "You and Grimes take care of the identification and warrant. I'm going to see about Mrs. Verhey."

Senes drove Morrison quickly to the hospital. The red light and siren heeled. Near the hospital he cut the siren and before the car had completely stopped Morrison was out and running.

He showed his credentials at the admitting desk of the hospital and was referred to Mrs. Verhey's room on the third floor.

On the third floor Lieutenant Spencer.

The man was talking with a nurse, and a white-haired young man, whom Morrison took to be an intern. They were coming to ward him, so he waited. Dr. Spencer had apparently given some instructions because when he stopped talking, the nurse went to the room and the young man walked up to the spare gray-haired man with the tired face and said, "Dr. Spencer?"

"Yes." It was just one word, but it was filled with weariness. "Morrison, police." He showed his identification again. "I've come about Mrs. Verhey. How is she?"

"Not good. Let's step into my office. I need to sit down."

Spencer must have been a member of the staff, because he had a private office on the floor below. It wasn't large, but it held a desk, filing cabinet and three chairs.

"Sit down, Morrison. I'm going to see if I can round up an orderly and get us some coffee."

Morrison nodded and sat down. There was an ash tray on the desk, so he guessed it was all right to smoke.

The doctor wasn't away long. When he returned, he sat at the desk and gave the policeman a questioning look.

"I thought you were in homicide, Mrs. Verhey was an assault case."

Mrs. Verhey lives next door to my homicide. You said her condition wasn't good, just now bad. Is she hurt?"

The physical injuries are minor, but the shock is dangerous. I'm worried about her emotional state."

PUFFED WITH PRIDE—With a relaxing puff on her pipe, Mrs. Louise Jackson, of Thornton, Colo., celebrated her 100th birthday. Believed to be the oldest double amputee in America, she has been smoking a pipe since she was eight years old. That was back in 1880. Arteriosclerosis forced the amputation of one leg when she was 99. The other was cut off when she was 102.

Top Officials Simply Don't Believe Faubus

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—Gov. Orval E. Faubus of Arkansas still has trouble getting some people in high places to believe him. What he says one time isn't necessarily what he says the next.

In the past year he has, in effect been called a liar by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and James C. Hagerty, President Eisenhower's press secretary.

And the U.S. Court of Appeals in St. Louis has decided his reasons for calling out the National Guard last year in the integration controversy at Little Rock Central High School.

Latest example of Faubus' troubles in the credibility department came Sunday when he said the White House had pressured him into saying the Supreme Court's order banning segregation in the public schools was the law of the land.

Last year—after he had called out guardsmen to keep Negroes from entering Central High School—Faubus flew to Newport, R.I., to confer with Eisenhower, who was vacationing there. They issued separate statements.

Part of Faubus' statement said: "I have never expressed any personal opinion regarding the Supreme Court decision of 1954 which voted integration. That is not relevant. That decision is the law of the land."

Since then Faubus has made statements saying the Supreme Court's decision is not the law of the land and that the Supreme Court has no authority to make a law.

Sunday he appeared on the CBS TV Show Face the Nation.

Reminded of the statement he issued in Rhode Island, he was asked why he has changed his mind about the high court's decision being the law of the land. Faubus said he hadn't changed his mind; that his saying so didn't make the decision law. Then he added this:

He said he had been required by the White House to make that statement as the price of negotiating with the White House. He admitted it was unusual for a governor to let himself be pressured into something like this.

Monday Hagerty was asked about this Faubus statement. Hagerty said: "I think the only thing I can have is no comment. You wouldn't print my comment that I feel like giving."

But Faubus even seems to have trouble making up his mind on whether a law passed by Congress ordering integration would be a law that had to be obeyed.

He was asked on TV: "Would you accept a declaration or a law by Congress on this (integration of public schools)?"

Faubus replied: "Well, I think if Congress passed a law, then it would be the law of the land, and there would be no means of questioning its legality."

Just a few days ago he appeared to take an exactly opposite position. On Aug. 26, appearing before the Arkansas Legislature to ask authority to prevent public school integration, he said: "There is no clear-cut federal statute requiring the integration of schools. If there were it would be unconstitutional for the authority to control public education has never been delegated by the states to the federal government."

Last year Faubus charged that FBI agents were tapping his telephone (he offered no proof) and that they were holding teenagers incommunicado for hours in Little Rock. Hoover said both statements were false.

Also last year—after Eisenhower sent federal troops into Little Rock to make sure Negroes could enter Central High—Faubus said the soldiers had invaded the privacy of his dressing room.

Hagerty answered for the White House: "Completely untrue and also completely vulgar."

Faubus has always argued that when he called out guardsmen to keep Negro children out of Central High—which a federal judge had ordered integrated—that he was not defying the court, but only trying to prevent mob violence.

The U. S. 8th Circuit Court of Appeals at St. Louis lashed out at this by saying that if Negro children were kept out of school to prevent mob violence, then by the same kind of reasoning: "The banks could be closed and emptied of their cash to prevent robbery, the post office locked to prevent the mails from being robbed, and the citizens kept off the streets to prevent holdups."

Thief Fouls Up Ceremonies

CHICAGO (AP)—A thief fouled up ceremonies for the American Legion's annual presentation of an Americanism award at a Loon hotel Monday. He stole the trophy.

The trophy, an impressive four-foot gold-plated figure astride a loving cup which in turn stood atop a 40-pound marble base, was to have been presented to the Legion's Department of Pennsylvania.

But when G. A. Tesch, national Americanism Commission director, prepared to present the trophy, it was missing. The gold-plated part of the trophy was valued at about $350, Tesch said.

"Some house swiped the trophy, screwed it right off the marble base and walked out of the hotel with it," he said. He said a similar trophy would be given the Pennsylvania department later.

MUDDY GOING—That pet duck atop the steps of this combine ought to be a muddhen. Abnormal rains halted the wheat harvest in central Missouri early in July. The Boone County Missouri Farmers Association estimates that half of the wheat grown in the county is still in the fields. LeRoy Kircher, seen on combine, and his brother Allen, who farm near Columbia, are getting out some wheat after equipping their self-propelled combine with half-tracks. These enable them to get through fields where ordinary combines and tractors would bury themselves in the mud.

Outer Space Cooperation to Be Planned

CHICAGO (AP) — The United States will propose in the United Nations in a few weeks a program for international cooperation in the field of outer space.

Henry Cabot Lodge, U.S. representative in the U.N., announced today that the program will be presented at the next regular session of the General Assembly.

Without going into any details of the U.S. plan, Lodge said in an address prepared for the annual national convention of the American Legion:

"No matter what happens, study and exploitation of outer space will go on and will take man where no human being has gone before. This will affect every man, woman and child in the world—and can be to their great benefit."

Lodge added that the United States will continue efforts to reach agreements, consistent with national security, in an effort to increase prospects that outer space will not be used for military purposes. He added:

"But even as we work for such agreements, an important start must be made now in opening this new realm for the benefit of all mankind."

"The United Nations, therefore, should immediately consider what it can do in this field; what outer space projects for peaceful purposes can be undertaken under United Nations auspices; and what sort of organization the United Nations can build so that the nations will work together in outer space."

"Some practical program for international cooperation in the scientific and peaceful study and exploration of outer space must be set up."

Lodge also predicted that a new attempt will be made again in the next few weeks to admit Communist China to the U.N.

He said the United States, which has blocked such moves on more than 30 previous occasions, "will undoubtedly deal with it successfully."

The convention, after a week-end of parading and merrymaking, moved into the serious aspects of its convention today.

Gibbons to Tell How He Got to Top

WASHINGTON (AP) — Harold J. Gibbons lets a chance today to tell how he climbed to the top echelon of the Teamsters Union and became boss of the union's affairs in the St. Louis area.

Gibbons, 47-year-old right-hand man in Teamster President James R. Hoffa, was called by the Senate Rackets Committee, which has been investigating alleged Teamster ties with hoodlums and charges of Teamster violence in labor disputes.

Previous witnesses have testified that Gibbons, top vice president of the union, truck union, locally, once local union outright directed violence in strikes, and rigged his election as president of the joint council ruling a score of Teamster locals in the St. Louis area.

St. Louis Detective Capt. Thomas L. Moran described Gibbons to the committee last week as a "controlling associate of underworld characters."

Moran told of beatings, arson and bombings in Gibbons-connected strikes in St. Louis.

Faubus, who declared:

"They (the board members) never have displayed any real inclination to listen to the will of the people of the school district, or any reasoning."

Faubus is armed with several anti-integration measures voted him with scant opposition in a special session of the state legislature last week — including power to close an integrated school.

School Supt. Virgil Blossom, in a prepared statement he read last night at a news conference, said that if the board had gone ahead with plans to open the schools on Sept. 8, it might have damaged chances of getting the Supreme Court to uphold the board's requested integration delay.

The court had based its date for a ruling on the assumption that schools here would not open until Sept. 15.

Schools originally were scheduled to open today. The Sept. 8 date was set to allow time for legal proceedings after the board took the case to the Supreme Court.

The issue before the high court now is whether the school board can delay its integration program for 2-12 years as U. S. District Judge Harry J. Lemley of Hope, Ark., ruled.

A series of conflicting lower court rulings brought the issue to the nation's highest tribunal.

Blossom declined to say what the board would do if the court ordered a resumption of integration.

Asked what would happen if the governor closed the school, he replied, "The board would be bound by state law."

Dr. Dale Afford was the lone dissenter in the board's 3-1 vote for the Sept. 15 opening date. He said he favored opening the schools Sept. 8 on a segregated basis and looking to the governor for action if the Supreme Court then ordered integration.

Schools could open segregated because the 1-2 year delay ruling of Judge Lemley is in effect until the Supreme Court issues its decision.

British and Iceland Fish Crews Battle

By EDDY GILMORE

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — British fishermen and Icelandic coast guardsmen battled hand-to-hand aboard a British trawler in the no-fishing zone off Iceland's east coast today, the Icelandic coast guard reported.

An official statement, broadcast by the government-owned radio, gave the Icelandic people a graphic account of the fight.

It said a rough battle ensued when an Iceland gunboat's crew attempted to seize the British trawler Northern Foam. The British frigate Eastbourne steamed to the trawler's side and took the Icelanders off, the radio said.

All this happened off the eastern tip of Iceland. It is the first reported violent contact in the nearly two day old fishing dispute between Iceland and Britain.

While the struggle at sea was going on, the trawler Northern Foam drifted in about four miles from the Icelandic coast, the radio said.

The British Embassy here said the Eastbourne was awaiting specific instructions what to do with the captured Icelandic coast-guardmen.

"In the confusion at sea, the coast guard said, the British navy tried to return its captives 'but the coast guard commander refused to take them back.' The coast guard said the Eastbourne then steamed away.

"Royal naval headquarters in London reported no violence occurred in the incident.

Britain has refused to recognize Iceland's extension of its territorial waters to 12 miles off the coast. The new limit, which sets up a ban on foreign fishermen inside the 12-mile line, took effect at midnight Sunday. The British frigate Eastbourne challenged the ban by moving to the prohibited waters.

There was shooting on the first day of Britain's defiance of the new limit. The British frigate managed to foil a boarding attempt yesterday by some fast maneuvering.

Foreign Minister Gudmundur Gudmundsson said Iceland had protested to London the use of force by the British navy "to prevent an Icelandic gunboat from arresting a British trawler."

In a broadcast to his north Atlantic island nation Monday night, Gudmundsson said he had ordered Iceland's ambassador in Paris to report the incident to NATO Secretary General Paul Henri Spaak.

Private talks arranged by Spaak broke down in Paris last Friday after Iceland rejected a proposal to share foreign waters only six miles to seaward. British Prime Minister Macmillan offered Sunday to resume these talks only if the dispute might be handed to the U.N. General Assembly meeting Sept. 10.

Feeling ran high against Britain among the 122,000 citizens of the tiny island. An armed guard was posted at the home of British Ambassador Andrew Gifford as a precaution.

It's back to college with a wardrobe that's easy to take care of and pretty to look at. This college girl (left) washes out clothes in the dorm bathroom, hangs them to dry on a portable laundry rack, and folds them to hold everything. A homemade drip pan of aluminum foil catches the water as the clothes drip. She wears (center) powder blue blouse in a mixture of silk and a synthetic and permanently pleated skirt over washable crepe. Both drip dry, of course. Another drip dry outfit (right) the little shirtwaist dress in handsome plaid with permanent pleats; this is just right for class wear.

Let Salesman Hit Road Alone

Dear Dorothy Dix:

A few months ago our firm hired a new salesman — a very personable young man indeed. We came friendly and he told me all about a product he has invented. He wants to give up his regular job and take to the road with his gadget, in which he has infinite faith. He has suggested that I go along as traveling companion and salesman. It sounds exciting. However, I have been dating a very nice — but unglamorous — boy in town. I hate to lose him altogether so what should I do? — Waverling

Dear Waverling: Your salesman friend has done a good job of selling himself to you; if he does as well with the gadget he'll be a tycoon. However, let him hit the road alone. Stay with the home boy who may not have much to sell but is willing to buy — a wedding ring.

Dear Dorothy Dix:

I have been away all summer. When I returned home I found that my very best girl friend had been spreading false stories about me while I was gone. Should I confront her and blast off, or would it be best to ignore it? — Adele

Dear Adele: Save the explosion until you hear the drop of a fact. The best way to squelch rumors like this is to try to pin them down. The next time someone comes to you with an "I heard" story, ask where she heard it, from whom, and when. She'll immediately be overcome by a vast vagueness.

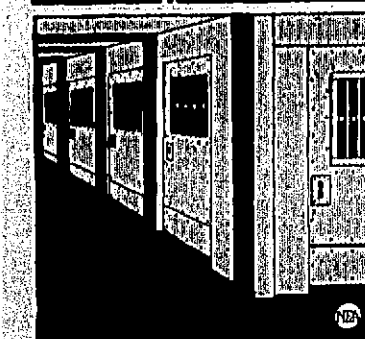

Dear Dorothy Dix:

Our 17-year-old daughter is permitted to date on weekends, but she must be home by 11 or 12 o'clock. She tells us that when she is 18 she can go and come as she pleases. Is she right? — Mrs. J. P.

Dear Mrs. J. P.: As long as your daughter remains under your roof, enjoying the home you provide, she is under your jurisdiction. Actually, there is no time whatsoever when people can "go or come as they please." This is a snare and delusion. She should be given more liberal dating privileges when she reaches 18, and be treated as an adult. She must remember, however, that the commandment "Honor thy father and mother" is binding for all time.

There are nearly 400 tree farms in Arkansas.

Matter of FACT

It was not until the 18th century that prisons began to be used for the punishment or correction of law violators. Until then, prisons were places where accused were held pending trial. After the trial, the sentence of the court — death, bodily punishment or fine — was carried out immediately. There were no prison sentences in those days.

Life Insurance Is Costing More

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Arkansans began paying more for life insurance yesterday but the overall property insurance bill probably will be less due to a $50 deductible clause inserted in the fire and windstorm coverage regulations.

The state Insurance Department recently approved an average seven per cent increase in fire rates, effective yesterday.

At the same time the $50 deductible provision was made mandatory in extended coverage protection with a decrease in rates from 51 cents to 28 cents per $1,000 of protection.

Rates for all unprotected frame property were increased an average of 13 per cent. Unprotected property is that outside the range of firefighting equipment.

Combs said the rate increases were granted on request of the Arkansas Inspection and Rating Bureau after state actuaries had determined the higher premiums were justified in order to enable insurance companies to make a reasonable profit.

There are nearly 400 tree farms in Arkansas.

New GE Motor Can Run Under Water

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP) — The General Electric Co. said today it has developed an electric motor also has been used elsewhere.

A special insulation system allows the windings, bearings and magnetic components to be totally immersed, a company announcement said.

GE said the biggest immediate use of the motor would be in industrial boiler circulating pumps. The motor also has been used experimentally on ships, mounted directly on the rudder for improved maneuverability at low speeds.

Shotgun Blast Kills a Youth

MARION, Ark. (AP) — A 15-year-old boy was killed accidentally yesterday near Gilmore when he dropped a shotgun and the weapon fired.

Deputy Sheriff Ivy Dickson said the charge struck the victim, Travis Easley, in the head. The boy died about an hour later.

The accident occurred on a country road near the home of the youth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Easley of Gilmore.

WHY DO YOU READ THE NEWSPAPER?

COPYRIGHT 1937, BUREAU OF ADVERTISING OF THE AMERICAN NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS ASSOCIATION, INC.

"I sit down with the paper every day to read it *and look for ads on things I need..."

Morning, noon or night, any day of the week, in the house or out, the newspaper remains to be read—and shopped—at the reader's convenience. Some folks like to read their newspapers before bed. Others relish them with their breakfast.

This is one of the great pluses for an advertiser—as so many advertisers well know. An ad is read by newspaper readers when the readers feel like it. There is no intrusion upon the readers' time and thus no resentment by prospective customers.

The convenience appeal of daily newspapers is one reason why people pay over $3,000,000 a day for the privilege of reading and shopping from more than 57,000,000 newspapers daily. People like to ponder over a potential purchase . . . and the best place to ponder is in the newspaper.

Whatever you sell, wherever you sell it—nationally, regionally or locally—you'll get more help selling it through the newspaper . . . where people find time to listen to your story.
